at the common and normal state of thought, we chew over problems or consider opportunities as we see and assess them, as well as being conscious of the fact that we're speaking at a particular moment or attempting to remember where you might have left a book that you're reading.

But has it ever come to one's attention that while the witting mind is at work during the 'conscious' or waking stage, the subconscious also works simultaneously, which works in the background by playing a key role in working on the 'subliminal' and 'imaginary' thinking.

As you are able to see, the subconscious is responsible for dipping into the mind's well of data that's responsible for speech construction, cognitive thinking in working out problems and oftentimes short term memory.

The subconscious is likewise responsible for assembling all data and ideas, feeding it to the conscious mind, so that when an idea comes to mind, it is so because it was already processed through the subconscious and passed on to the witting mind when the correct stimuli prompted the particular idea. It's the subconscious that's responsible for making us respond automatically and involuntarily like driving a car and not carefully thinking of every movement or action.

Authorities trust that audio hypnotherapy is the best way to access the subconscious, as well as induce a subject to come into a subconscious state.

It's through the process of centering, as well as deep relaxation exercises that a subject is inducted to the subconscious level, as the witting mind is claimed and subdued by taking a less active role during the individual hypnotic activity, briefly, a temporary about-face of functions of both the conscious and the subconscious.

This about-face of mind function has really been a phenomenon that has been going on for thousands of years, unknowingly happening among a lot of individuals who temporarily assume a sleep or trance-like state, frequently construed as points of insanity or stupor.

But it has been provided with a deeper comprehending, when a doctor gave measured attention to this phenomenon and finally developed the initial process of bringing on this trance-like state among his subjects.

This has led to subsequent breakthroughs in comprehending the subconscious realm and getting us closer to suggesting how the subconscious works.

Although these finds have just provided a glimpse of how the mind may be harnessed, still it's but a tip of the iceberg and science is yet to amply answer the question of how the subconscious truly works, since man has only been able to harness one-tenth of his brain.

Still, the human brain remains a mystery.

But one thing's for certain, audio hypnotherapy can help in many areas.
