Twitter As Your Marketing Tool

If you were to apply internet marketing strategies that existed 10 years ago, you would be surprised that most of them are no longer viable or have become ineffective.

Thus, it is highly important that we stay on top of the trends of what works and what doesn't. One of the hottest trending strategies we see nowadays is Social media and one in particular tool – Twitter.

Richard Koch in his great book – The Star Principle says that successful businesses must always be the market leader and must always ride on growing trends.

If you fail to tap into these hot trends, you'll be leaving tons of money on the table. And that's why, the purpose of this report is to help you tap into this amazing phenomenon and grow your business around it.

Chapter 1: Introduction To Twitter And Social Media

Twitter is the largest micro-blogging platform that allows people to send short messages or “tweets” to their followers in real time. With Twitter, the spread of information has become much faster and businesses stand a lot to gain from tapping into this phenomenon.

Twitter is a type of Social Media Marketing tool, which businesses can tap into immediately. Gone are the days of cold hard advertising. Statistics show that products that are referred to others by friends sell much easier.

Twitter eases social sharing via tweets and huge hype can be built around launches via trending topics using the “#” tag.

Besides that, Twitter has an increasingly growing user base and has currently millions of users. This can potentially be a huge source of traffic.

The social media phenomenon is one of those exploding trends which needs to be tapped into by businesses, big or small to tap into a larger pool of customers. Even people in the golden era have started to use social media as their main form of interaction with their peers.

Chapter 2: Basics Of Twitter Marketing

Like any business, you must have a clear game plan or marketing plan or you may find yourself spending plenty of precious time using Twitter but seeing few results. Remember you are using Twitter for marketing and not a casual tool.

Think of specific keywords in selecting your Twitter username. Keep it easy to remember and spell. For personal branding, your own name works wonders. Also, don't forget to think keywords in your short bio. People will often find others on Twitter by searching keywords in Twitter Search. Choose a good picture of you for the image because most people remember faces well.

When your account is set up be sure to start tweeting (status updating) right away. Don't be picky. Just start sharing. It's important that you have some updates on your Twitter page before others see it. Remember, content is king. Tweet links to your videos, squidoo lenses, articles, blogposts, audios, or anything else interesting to your target niche market.

Once you have a huge following be sure to post content regularly. Since you can post to Twitter via cell phone, instant messaging, Facebook, Squidoo, MySpace, Blogger, TypePad, and Wordpress new tweets can happen even when you are doing something else.

Chapter 3: Building Your Twitter Page

The first thing you must do as get an account at Twitter.com and setup your profile page ASAP. Use a custom twitter background instead of those templates (a big no-no). On your profile page, put up a quirky yet description about yourself or your business that gets people curious about you.

For your custom twitter background, you can use a glamour shot and design graphics which display your business logo, website/blog url, Facebook fan page url and email so that people can contact you easily.

Try not to put your images too far to the side of the page as certain browsers with different resolutions will cause the details to be hidden.

Don't put it too centre either because the tweet box will block it!

Also, use a clean, simple design so that people who visit your twitter page can have an enjoyable experience.

Once you've got your Twitter page up and running, it is time to start getting followers!

Chapter 4: How To Get More Twitter Followers

In the beginning of your Twitter campaign you can click "find people" and via Gmail, Yahoo, or AOL you can find friends who already use Twitter.

Find and follow the leaders in your niche by scouring the many Twitter user directories. Be prepared to spend time observing these leaders and the various social orders within the user base.

These observations will help you to find the leaders in your niche.. Pay particular attention to these trendsetters/influencers. Befriend as many of your competitors as possible, but do not forego the small guy as they tend to be quicker to repost your messages. These relationships should be nurtured over time and a few may well lead to some kind of joint ventures in the future.

Another simpler way of getting followers fast is simply promoting your Twitter on your blog, Facebook fan page or email lists of people who are already following you. Tell them that they can get the latest updates and news (as well as special offers) by following your Twitter.

In short, join the conversation and get involved in your community! That is the fastest way to build a huge following.

Chapter 5: The Twitter Marketing Strategy

Every business needs a marketing strategy. Here's some simple twitter marketing strategy you can immediately learn and apply to your business to start growing it immediately:

Who do you want to reach on Twitter? Be specific and limit your scope to the demographic you really need – Don't try and hit everything that moves!

Look up at least 10 of your customers on Twitter (a quick name search on Google can turned up their Twitter profiles). Once you've found some, look at who they're following and who they talk to. These people could also become part of your audience. See how they describe themselves and the keywords they use.

The goal here is not to find everyone you'd like to interact with (that would probably be next to impossible), but to find people who might fit into your audience. Try to lookout for important people in your audience.

Understand their language- You need to understand how your audience talks, what they like, and what they share. Look up what people are saying about your company. Are they saying good things or bad things? Are they asking for advice about what product or company to choose or are they giving feedback?

Do the same for your competitors. Note if your competitors are jumping in or influencing any of these conversations.

Notice tonality- Are they generally formal or informal? This will be very different depending on the companies you are tracking and the people you attract. It's always good to match the tone of your audience.

Also, look at what your audience shares and retweets. What kinds of links and articles do they like? What kinds of terms and ideas get them excited or annoyed?

Finally, don't forget to set a goal and track your progress. Determine what you want to achieve within your community and monitor your progress – it's the surefire way to success!

Chapter 6: Integrating Twitter With Other Websites

You can actually integrate Twitter with a variety of social platforms and your website to create buzz and a huge following.

One of these places is your blog. I love blogs. You can add a “Tweet This” plugin at the end of every blog posts so to ease the sharing of your great content with others. One good plugin I use is ShareThis which incorporates not just Twitter, but also Facebook, Emails, Digg, Reddit etc.

Besides that, you can add a “Follow Me On Twitter” button on the side bar of your blog so you can get more followers. Vice-versa, you can tweet followers

What about Facebook? If you got a Fan page budding with fans, you can encourage them to add you on Twitter. You can also install an app where your Facebook content automatically gets tweeted so that you can lead your Twitter followers to your Facebook fan page and vice versa – Isn’t technology wonderful?

One more thing worthy to mention, is using your Twitter account as your signature wherever you go – Name cards, forums, commenting on blogs – All these are places where you can build a following and get more customers. Try it today!

Chapter 7: Advanced Twitter Tricks

Here's a couple of advanced twitter tricks you can learn and apply immediately:

1. Tweet 125 characters instead of 140: Although you can now tweet more than 140 characters, the whole purpose of Twitter is the short messages. Shorten your tweets to 125 (or shorter if you can) to encourage easy re-tweets and added comments.
2. Try Friendfeed for finding tweets- Friendfeed is a very good resource for searching for old tweets. Twitter Search only goes back a few weeks, but Friendfeed allows you to search back much older tweets.
3. Use Groups to organize your Twitter: Even when you are following a large number of twitter users, you really pay close attention to only a sum of their tweets. By creating groups in your Twitter client, you have a columns for those tweets that are really important.
4. Don't Use & in Your Twitter Profile: For some reason, the "&" symbol doesn't get along well with Twitter and won't be displayed properly.

Chapter 8: Twitter Mistakes To Avoid

Twitter can be a great way to get more followers. That is if you do things correctly. If you make these silly mistakes, you'll end up doing more harm than good:

1. Ranting or blabbing on your business Twitter account.
2. Randomly following twitter users just to increase one's number of followers.
3. Be inactive after you've garnered a following.
4. Don't ever brag too much and provide zero value.
5. Do not expect to be re-tweeted if you do not re-tweet in return.
6. Do not take your followers for granted.
7. Spamming is a huge no-no
8. Using default avatars such as the egg.
9. Do not EVER use generic backgrounds.
10. Don't use Twitter to stalk or harm others.

In short, stay away from these Twitter mistakes and you'll be on the pathway to twitter success! Remember, treat others like how you would like to be treated. Which in this case means constantly striving to give quality content.

Wrapping Up

Twitter can help your business grow in terms of building rapport with your audience, increasing your customer base, and helping the spread of information to your market at a faster pace.
